Gênero & Direito is a peer reviewed interdisciplinary journal committed to exploring gender in its relationship to law, other sciences and axes of power as class, sexuality and race.

This special issue on women's political subjectivity is titled La Soggettività Politica Delle Donne: un dibattito Internazionale.

The essays presented in this volume result of a seminar put on by the italian 'inter-university working group on women's political subjectivity'. The working group has been discussing feminist debate in Italy since 2011.

We thank the authors for translating the articles for this special issue and we hope you enjoy reading.
